Alexander Announces Web Site Detailing Smart, Responsible Stimulus Plan

WASHINGTON, D.C. – U.S. Rep. Rodney Alexander, R-Quitman, today announced the launch of <http://republicanwhip.house.gov/jobs>, a new web site outlining the House Republican Economic Recovery Plan. The web site details a smart, responsible stimulus plan that will create twice the jobs at half the price of the economic package that Democrats forced through the House despite bipartisan opposition.

“During this time of economic uncertainty, House Republicans have proposed an Economic Recovery Plan that will actually create jobs for the people of the 5th Congressional District,” said Alexander. “Working families throughout America are struggling to pay their bills, and are facing increased economic anxieties that have not been felt in this country for generations. I believe the focus of any stimulus package must be on helping working families and small businesses. I hope that you will visit this web site to learn more about the House Republican Economic Recovery Plan,” continued Alexander.

House Republicans are committed to an open and transparent exchange of ideas to find the best solutions to get the U.S. economy back on track. The House Republican Economic Recovery Plan contains the constructive, common-sense ideas that should be included in any stimulus legislation.

“The House Republican plan is smart, simple and will stimulate the economy at half the price of the Democratic Majority’s proposal, while protecting, preserving and creating jobs,” said Alexander. “As a father and grandfather, my goal is to get America back on track without saddling future generations with trillions in debt or higher taxes.”
